DEMOCRATIC PARTY SPLIT IN MARYLAND

Prince George County Workers Charging Domination by Organization.

STATESVILLE, Md., May 28.—That there is to be a bitter fight for the ranks of the Democratic party in Prince George county now seems certain. The anti-organization faction charges leaders of the organization hold star sessions in a Washington hotel and pick a ticket for the people to vote as the primaries.

The withdrawal of State Auditor J. Enos Ray, Jr., as a candidate for the State senate from the county, and the endorsement of William Holmes, president of the board of county commissioners, makes it appear as if the organization wing of the Democratic party is going to get behind John Walter Smith and Blair Lee for the long and short term, respectively. United States Senatorship. Mr. Ray is a strong supporter of Senator Smith, and Mr. Holmes has at all times supported Blair Lee.

Leaders of the anti-organization faction, it is said, will hold a meeting in Upper Marlboro soon and endorse the full county ticket. They will endorse William L. Marbury and Blair Lee for the United States Senate. It is said they also will endorse George Hardy as their candidate for the State senate.

Police and Firemen May Have to Pay Their Fares

Policemen, firemen, and other persons who ride on the street cars without payment of fare may be denied the privilege, according to a statement of Capt. Julian L. Schley, executive officer of the Public Utilities Commission, today.

For years, members of the police and fire department in uniform have been given free transportation by the street railway companies, which have issued passes also to its employees and other favored individuals. It is probable that hereafter all passengers will be required to produce either a car ticket or a nickel.

The public utilities bill provides "that it shall be unlawful for any person, firm, or corporation to solicit, accept or receive any rebate, concession or discrimination in respect to any service in or affecting or relating to any public utility." It is probable that the opinion that the law prohibits the issuance of passes.

Hatches Eggs Over Hot Water Spring In Mine Dry Room

BIG RUN, Pa., May 28.—J. H. London, superintendent of the Eleanor coal mine, near here, has turned the mine into an incubator.

London placed twenty-three white Wyandotte eggs in a basket and hung them in a small dry room of the mine where hot water continually bubbles from the ground. The temperature varies less than a degree the year round.

Hanging his basket of eggs several feet above the spouting hot water, London attended to the eggs as he would had they been in an incubator. At the end of the regular time for incubation, which occurred yesterday, the eggs began to hatch, and this morning London had twenty-one healthy chicks from his twenty-three eggs.

TRADE BOARD WILL FIGHT TRAFFIC LAW

Body Plans to Carry Contest to New Commissioners to Be Named by Wilson.

Unable to convince the present Commissioners that the recently promulgated traffic regulations are not correct, the street traffic committee is determined to make another attempt under the Commissioners that are to be appointed by President Wilson. The committee, which recently in executive session and heard a report from William P. Enos, who drew the traffic rules for New York and London, and who commends the present Washington regulations as cumbersome and, in many instances, unfair.

The recommendations of the Board of Trade, prepared by Mr. Enos, will not be made public until the appointment of the new Commissioners, but it is known they are much shorter than the present regulations, and it is understood they are more liberal to automobile drivers.

It is further understood that the Enos recommendations are less definite, and are more properly common law rules of the road than the regulations applying to special cases such as are now in force.

The traffic committee of the trade board has charged because of the slight alleged to have been committed against the organization by the Commissioners. The Commissioners worked out the regulations and declared them in effect without consulting the Board of Trade. The committee, and that committee understood that its advice would be asked before the Commissioners determined finally on the laws. The committee has found much fault with the regulations and will make every effort to have them amended.

Anna Gets "His" for Marrying Mere Man

ROME, May 28.—Anna Micozzi, a woman in spite of the feminine name, is a man, must pay rather dearly for having perpetrated the joke of allowing himself to be courted and married by a woman. She has been successfully simulating until after the marriage the aspect of a woman.

The marriage was today annulled, and under the orders of the court "Anna" will do up "her" long tresses on the top of her head and work as a farm hand until "she" has earned enough money to pay all the costs of the case, which, under the Italian law, are anything but light.

British Papers Lavish Space on Roosevelt Suit

LONDON, May 28.—The British newspapers today devoted lavish space to accounts of Colonel Roosevelt's libel suit. Several of the morning newspapers printed boxes showing what Colonel Roosevelt drinks and what he does not drink, and for the benefit of their British readers, they carried "classifications" of American drinks, defining the alcoholic beverages to which the colonel referred in his testimony.

WIDOW GETS MOST OF FLAGLER ESTATE

Inherits About Sixty Million, and Only Son Receives Oil Stock Worth Five Million.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., May 28.—Most of the estate of the late Henry M. Flagler, estimated at worth between $50,000,000 and $70,000,000, goes to his widow under the will filed at St. Augustine. The only son, Harry Harkness Flagler, child of the first Mr. Flagler's three marriages, receives as his only bequest 5,000 shares of stock in the Standard Oil Company of New Jersey, valued at $5,000,000.

His second wife, from whom Mr. Flagler was divorced when she was adjudged incurably insane, is now in a sanitarium at Central Valley, N. Y. She gets nothing from the estate, but Standard Oil stock now worth $3,000,000 was set aside for her before the divorce. Harry Harkness Flagler and his father were estranged for ten years and had not spoken until a few days before Mr. Flagler's death.

The first Mrs. Flagler, who was a Miss Harkness, died about twenty-two years ago. There was a daughter, Miss Jenny Flagler, as well as the son, Harry Harkness Flagler, by this marriage. Miss Flagler became the wife of Arthur Hinkley, Boston, and subsequently was married to Frederick H. Benedict. She died several years ago.

Mr. Flagler took as his second wife Miss Ida M. Shrouds, daughter of a Philadelphia merchant. In 1897 she was declared legally insane by Justice Gildersleeve. In 1901 a law was passed in Florida making incurable insanity a ground for divorce, and on August 1 of that year Mr. Flagler got a divorce decree.

Ten days later he married Miss Lily Keenan, of Wilmington, Del., who, as widow, now inherits the bulk of the estate.

It was said at the time of the divorce that the son, Harry Harkness Flagler, opposed sending his stepmother to the asylum for the insane, and that the action of any lobbyists who might be discovered was proper or improper.

Addresses commending the Boy Scouts movement were made by Scoutmaster Marshall, the Rev. Merritt Earl, the Rev. G. L. White, Arthur B. Suit and Mr. Woods.

Roof Garden Opening Depends on Weather

Scores of theatergoers and others who had planned attending last night the opening of the new Raleigh roof garden, postponed Monday night because of rain, were disappointed, and the management to announce another postponement. The formal opening of the popular roof retreat, where hundreds of Washingtonians find refreshing breezes during the summer months, will not take place until weather conditions assure comfortable outdoor seats.

If the skies clear and stay clear today the probabilities are that the opening of the roof will be tonight. Everything is in readiness to accommodate the initial throngs.

Admission will be by card only. Several new features will be introduced, including the Unaphone, a musical instrument which has not been heard in Washington as yet, and which, yet, is expected to become a very popular form of entertainment.

Economizing Senators To Drink Plain Water

Economy with a big "E" has struck the Senate office building, likewise the Senate, and is making life a dreary, parched affair for the downtrodden Senators.

Some weeks ago Senate bath rooms, rather parlors, were abolished. Now the edict has gone forth against spring water and ice in the Senate offices.

This follows on a previous order which prohibited Apollinaris and like fancy waters.

Statesmen will have to drink, if they insist on drinking water, from the supply of the Potomac river. Most Washington folks have found Potomac water wholesome, but it has never before been esteemed quite the thing for a Senator.

Furthermore, the free barber shop is threatened with abolishment. The pay of the old soldiers who sit at the doors of the Senate has been cut in two, and there are other assaults on extravagance. Almost any day, a powerful frontal movement is expected to force pie down to 5 cents and coffee down to a like figure.

Davies on First Day In His New Position

Joseph E. Davies is serving his first day as Commissioner of Corporations, having taken the oath of office late yesterday afternoon. The oath was administered by Warren E. Coate, chief clerk of the Bureau of Corporations, in the presence of Secretary of Commerce Redfield.

The new commissioner receives in the shape of this office a reward for having remained a Democrat out of principle through years when Democrats in his native State, Wisconsin, were so few as to be politically negligible.

Davies is a young man, having finished his student days in 1901, when he was graduated in law. Three years before that he received a degree in arts. He is a member of the Phi Beta Kappa honorary fraternity and of Delta Kappa Epsilon, a society which has known him in Washington as yet, and which, yet, have offered him a diplomatic position and the Assistant Secretaryship of War.

ELECTRIC LINE AIDS BLUEMONT FARMERS

Truck Growers Largely Benefited by Increased Service Along Virginia Division.

From five trains to sixteen trains daily each way through a territory that has for many years been noted for its stock and grain farms, but is rapidly developing into a truck farming country, is the progress of the first year during which the Washington and Old Dominion Railroad Company has operated the Bluemont division, formerly owned by the Southern railway.

The purchase was made June 20, 1912, and since that time the officials in the Washington and Old Dominion Company have transformed the road from a grain to an electric road and practically rebuilt the roadbed.

Officials of the company entertained a party of newspaper men and other friends on a trip to the Blue Ridge mountains yesterday afternoon, the trip being made in special cars over the newly electrified roadbed. From Bluemont the party was driven to the highest point in the vicinity—a point which commands a splendid view of the Shenandoah valley on the one hand and the Loudoun county on the other.

The guests were John F. Poole, president of the Federal National Bank; L. P. Shoemaker, and A. C. P. Shoemaker, real estate men of Washington, and E. C. R. Humphries, H. P. Thompson, B. A. Mattingly, W. P. Kennedy, Charles Bayne, William Gibson, John D. Daly, A. W. Leonard, F. D. Lander, Joel Chandler Harris, and C. M. Rippey, newspapermen. All the newspaper men were from Washington except Mr. Rippey, who is located at Herndon, and Mr. Harris, a son of the Joel Chandler Harris, who is now conducting a weekly newspaper at Leesburg, Va.

The increased transportation facilities has already changed to a considerable degree the farming methods of the section. Loudoun county and the counties which lie between Washington and Bluemont have long been known for stock and grain, but today truck farms are rapidly taking the place of the grain and stock farms.

It is estimated that the railroad is today serving about 8,000 people.
